COUCH THEATER

Sounds like a fair fight

Sanford police responded to the 2200 block of French Avenue on Wednesday when they met with a woman who reported a man had assaulted her.

The boyfriend told police the two were arguing all day. He said that during the argument, he kicked her girlfriend, but he kept following her. During the altercation, he said, she slapped his face and knelt on his chest. According to the police report, the man said he was保护ing her and was not trying to harm her.

The fight ended with both getting up and walking out of the house. The witness, who lives across the street, told police she heard a disturbance and confirmed the fight.

Jennifer Roland, 21, of Sanford, was charged with domestic violence battery.

What’s not like he was selling it

Sanford police responded to the Lake Monroe Apartments last Saturday after someone reported that two men inside were having an affair in a car wash area.

When police arrived and questioned one of the men in the car wash area, one said he was reselling people’s car because he was the car washman. He told police the vehicle he was reselling was found in a used car lot as a Salvage car.

The officer looked under the vehicle and immediately found a newfound vehicle using the same view as a salvage yard bag with a white paper produce label.

When questioned about this, the man said he was only trying to make money and that he did not know if the person he was reselling was the one who wanted it. The officer also acknowledged the drugs inside the vehicle and said that he was the one who told him he was selling it legally.

The man went on to tell police that he was being high when he was using it for his blazer, that he had put out before and was trying to sell it.

Russell Bush, 20, of Sanford, was charged with possession of a controlled substance, possession of a controlled substance with the intent to sell, and drug equipment possession.
